FIRST INHABITANTS

The first known inhabitants of the Walnut Creek area were Bolbones Indians. In March 1772, the first Spanish explorers arrived to the region. California became a possession of Mexico following the Mexican Revolution in 1821.

To encourage settlement in its newly-acquired territory, Mexico made large land grants, four of which were in the Walnut Creek area. A grant of nearly 18,000 acres in what today is the Ygnacio Valley was made to Dona Juana Sanchez de Pacheco, whose husband, Miguel, had been a war hero for Mexico. She deeded her property to two grandsons, Ygnacio and Ysidro Sibrian. Ygnacio Sibrian, the namesake of the Ygnacio Valley, built the first roofed residence in the valley around 1850. Following the Mexican-American War, California became a United States territory and subsequently a state in 1850.

FROM A "CROSSROADS" TO A CITY

Walnut Creek was first known as "The Corners" -- where the two roads leading from Pacheco and Lafayette converged. Today those "corners" are at the intersection of Mt. Diablo Boulevard and North Main Street. The area's first settler was William Slusher, a squatter who built the first roofed abode on the bank of what was then known as "Nuts Creek" in 1849 (in the area of Liberty Bell Plaza).

In 1855, Milo Hough of Lafayette decided to develop The Corners and built a hotel called the "Walnut Creek House." A blacksmith shop and a store were soon built nearby. A year later, Hiram Penniman (who would later build the ranch house now used as the Shadelands Ranch Historical Museum) laid out the first town site and realigned what is now Main Street.

Continued growth led to the establishment of a U.S. Post Office in December 1862, around which time the community was renamed "Walnut Creek." The downtown street patterns laid out by pioneer Homer Shuey in his two original subdivisions in 1871-72 can still be found today.

On Oct. 21, 1914 the original town and surrounding area, comprising 500 acres, were incorporated as the eighth city in Contra Costa County. The City Council was originally called the City's Board of Trustees and its president was Harry Spencer. In 1928, state law was changed to allow cities to call their boards "city councils." On July 6, 1927, the first reference to a mayor of Walnut Creek was made for Mayor James F. Mauzy. On April 16, 1928, the Walnut Creek Board of Trustees officially renamed itself "Board of Councilmen", and on June 21, 1928, it became simple the "Town Council." However, the earliest reference to "City Council" was in the minutes of the Oct. 25, 1929 meeting.

As health care needs expand, so does Walnut Creek’s capacity to serve. John Muir/Mt. Diablo Health System and Kaiser Permanente furnish up-to-the-minute treatments and advice. Kaiser Permanente Medical Center contributes to the ever-expanding medical services available for Walnut Creek. Kaiser’s surgical staff oversees 6,000 surgeries annually and doctor visits number more than 500,000 each year.

The 321-bed John Muir Medical Center recently merged with Concord’s 259-bed Mount Diablo Medical Center to form the John Muir/Mt. Diablo Health System. The merger produced a health system that offers patients advanced technology and state-of-the-art-facilities. John Muir Medical Center is designated as the trauma center for Contra Costa County, and has a specialized team of highly trained professionals ready for any emergency. The Medical Pavilion, a 73-bed facility located in neighboring Concord, provides behavioral health care for children, adolescents and adults.

Walnut Creek has several other hospitals that cater to specific needs. ManorCare Health Services and Guardian of Rossmoor are nursing facilities while Walnut Creek Alzheimer’s and Dementia provide psychiatric care.
